OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

LABOR.

Commercial-Gazette.

Labor was never better paid in Cincinnati than this year. There is in fact a scarcity of labor, whether it be skilled or unskilled, and in both there has been a steady advance in wages. This is not the result of strikes or pressure of any kind, but the natural consequence of a demand that exceeds the supply.

VERY CRUDE PLATFORM.

Philadelphia Ledger.

The "American party," organized in San Francisco, has some good points in its platform, coupled with other and inconsistent matter, that will expose it to criticism, and limit its following, and, therefore, its effectiveness. In adopting a resolution that the law should be so amended as to prevent the coming to our shores of all aliens who are criminals or paupers, the convention does not seem to know that such laws are in existence, and that, though there is difficulty in enforcing them, a great many undesirable immigrants are excluded under these provisions. The new party also proposes a repeal of the naturalization laws and favors legislation requiring citizens to vote—two things that do not hang well together. Compulsory voting implies the necessity of having all men attend to their duties as citizens; a refusal to naturalize foreigners would be an excess of the demand, to more than make up the deficiency. There is no excuse, therefore, for the excessively high prices talked about, beyond the desire of a few gamblers to make big fortunes at the expense of consumers.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR WAXING.

Journal of Commerce.

We predicted that before it reached a stage where it threatened the peace of society it would fall to pieces by its own weight; or if it did not, that the fifteen or twenty millions of stalwart people in no wise committed to its doctrines would make short work of it when it began to make trouble for them.

THE TOBACCO CORNER.

Pittsburgh Chronicle.

The truth is coming out about the attempt by speculators to get up a corner in leaf tobacco. The crop this year is light, but enough was left over from last year, when the product was far in excess of the demand, to more than make up the deficiency. There is no excuse, therefore, for the excessively high prices talked about, beyond the desire of a few gamblers to make big fortunes at the expense of consumers.

GROWTH OF CAMP-MEETINGS.

Baltimore Sun.

It has been the practice in some quarters for many years to argue that there was no longer the same need for religious camp-meetings as in the earlier settlement of the country, when the opportunities for worship and social intercourse were almost impossible. But in spite of the multiplication of summer resorts and seaside retreats where religion is not considered, camp-meetings continue to be held every summer, and have gone on increasing in numbers and influence.

OPIUM HABIT AND PREVENTION.

Dallas (Tex.) News.

The opinion of Iowa is that opium consumption has increased under liquor prohibition. One of the most frequently used arguments on the anti-prohibition side is that the consumption of light wines and beer is favorable to a diminution of the demand for ardent spirits. By parity of reasoning freedom in satisfying the appetite with any form of liquor tends to prevent the use of opium.

THE PERNICKY PENSION POLICY.

Boston Herald.

The question is raised how far it is justifiable for a party to endeavor to make votes for itself by appealing to the people's money. It is not meant by this simply the adoption of a liberal policy in the expenditure, with a view to gain public favor. That may be done with a conscientious belief that a liberal policy in expenditure is in itself right. But when a large class of men is found who, either in themselves or in their connections, cast many votes, and it is proposed to grant those men direct payment of money from the National Treasury, with a view to the procurement of there is votes for the party appropriating it, then, alike in a moral and in a statesmanlike point of view, the act is open to the most serious objection.

IMMIGRATION.

Louisville Commercial.

Mr. Powderly is again crying out against "indiscriminacy," and says only those should be admitted who are capable of assuming the responsibilities of American citizenship. He says the country is now overcrowded, and that the working people are already elbowing one another. Mr. Powderly is needlessly alarmed, and his pessimistic views are evidently based more from the standpoint of a Knight of Labor than from that of an unprejudiced observer. There is a law against pauper immigration, which keeps out those who cannot assume American citizenship, and while there may be too much competition to suit the Knights or the more skilled laborers, there is still plenty of room in this immense country to accommodate all who are willing to work. Kentucky, for instance, could take a few thousand, or even a million even without any undue straining of its inhabitants, and the boundless, wild and waste West could absorb a billion without a trace of congestion. This is a great country, Mr. Powderly, Pennsylvania being but a speck on the map of Uncle Sam's domain.

SUPPRESSION AND COMPLIANCE.

Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The continual howling of Gov. Foraker, Senator Sherman and other Red-pink leaders about the suppression of colored voters in the South is mere gibber, gotten up simply and solely for the purpose of rousing up sectional prejudice. It is the same old bloody shirt that has been flouted in the face of the North for the past twenty years. The colored voters in the South have the same opportunities to exercise their privilege of voting that any white man has. The restraint of colored voters in the South, if any exists, will not compare for a moment with the dictation and compulsion practiced by certain manufacturers and business men in the city of Cleveland in 1872, '76, '81 and '84, when the laboring men were told emphatically that if they did not vote the Republican ticket their places would be filled by others that would. They were told that if the Democratic party came into power the mills and shops would be closed, and as a consequence the men out of a job. Certain Republican business men and Republican politicians took their men to the polls in droves and literally forced them against their principles, to vote the Republican ticket. The same tactics will be resorted to in this city this fall in order to carry the State for Foraker. There is not an election, national, State or municipal, in Ohio but with the same tactics are resorted to. These men should be ferreted out and punished, and they will be if a repetition of the proceedings of 1880 is attempted.

THE JUDGE "GOAT."

Arkansas Traveler.

Judge Whippleton, of the Twenty-ninth Judicial Circuit, is, while on the bench, a man of severe dignity, but in private life he is known as a gentleman of many admirable social qualities. Several days ago the Judge went out into the mountains to rest and amuse himself, and had just dismounted from his horse when a peculiar-looking old fellow came along the rough path that wound its way among the jagged rocks. The old fellow upon spying the Judge, stopped, looked earnestly, and then an odd smile crept about the corners of his mouth, and then, as though seeking ambush, secreted himself in the old fellow's whiskers.

"Good morning," the Judge pleasantly called.

"Hi."

"Do you live about here?"

"Ah, hah."

"Any fish in this stream?"

"Duno."

"Plenty of squirrels up there, I suppose."

"Duno."

"Think we'll have rain?"

"Duno."

The Judge, somewhat disgusted, turned away and threw his line into the water. "Chug," a stone struck his cork. He turned quickly, but saw no movement on the part of the old fellow, who sat on a stone with his hands shoved deep into his pockets.

"What was that?" the Judge demanded.

"What?"

"Something struck my cork."

"Don't know notin' 'bout it."

The Judge turned away, but the old fellow sat with his hands in his pockets.

"Look here, sir, I believe that's you."

"Yes, this is me."

"I say I believe you threw those stones."

"Which stones?"

"Those that struck my cork. Don't you do it again?"

The Judge again devoted himself to his fishing, but not without interruption, for a stone came down and knocked his cork off.

"You confounded old wretch! What's the matter with you?"

"Nobin! What's the matter with you?"

"You good-for-nothing old rascal, you don't know how to treat a gentleman."

"Never had a chance to treat one at all."

"Don't talk to me that way. You don't know who I am."

"Yes, I reckon I do." The smile sprang from its ambush in his whiskers and pranced over his face. "Some time ago," said the old fellow, "I was a witness in yo' Court, an' while I wuz there you let one o' them lawyers ketch me in a lie an' frowned at me an' rid over me an' bil me down an' cleared yo' throat at me an', done ever'ting you could to make me wuz that I wuz dead, an' now you must git."

"What do you mean?"

"Mean that you, I must git; mosey away from here. It's my time to get you off. I say I believe you threw those stones."

"He drew an enormous horse-pistol.

"Gut!"

"Look out, I—"

"Gut!"

"Let me get my hat and coat."

"Never mind. Git!"

The Judge got up, and when he turned home he told his wife that he had given his hat and coat to a poor blind man whom he had found in the hills.

"Ah, Robert," she said, and she put her arms around his neck, "your generosity and benevolence will be rewarded, if not in this world—"

"That's all right, Mary. The poor needed help."

"Why, you've torn your trousers and the heel o' one of your boots."

"I jumped into the water a few little girls."

"You are a noble man, Robert."

A GREAT TEMPERANCE POWER.

Philadelphia Bulletin.

Chicago is exercising its gigantic intellect in search of a method to get McGarigle back from Canada. Of course, he cannot be extradited for the crime of which he was convicted, but it is proposed, according to yesterday's dispatches, to raise up a charge of forgery, which is an offense within the treaty, and to bring him home upon that. If the movers in this scheme will consult their attorneys, and if the attorneys happen to be worth anything, they will quietly be informed that there is nothing in it—that the position is a veritable chestnut, long since worn and whiskered. It came to adjudication first in our enterprising suburb of Covington, where a City Treasurer named Smith had embezzled a large amount of money and had escaped to Canada. They brought him back on a charge of forgery, upon which he was tried and very properly acquitted. Then they sought to try him for embezzlement, of which he was unquestionably guilty.

The cause went before a special Judge, who is now one of the Circuit Judges of the United States. The defense maintained that a prisoner brought back to this country upon writ of extradition could only be tried for the extraditable crime, and they succeeded in interesting the British Minister at Washington, and, through him, our State Department in the question. The Court sustained their plea; and further, that, after acquittal of the charge upon which he was extradited, the prisoner must be allowed reasonable time, without obstruction, wherein to return to Canada, before he could be tried upon any other charge. The doctrine has since been sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States, and is now the law of the land. But if the Republican Senate of the United States had not been oppressed with a narrow, partisan jealousy, such criminals as McGarigle, would long since have been subject to extradition. A new treaty with Great Britain, including both embassies and a trial by jury, would have been agreed upon by the two countries.

The Lexington correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer has given his views on the recent State election. As he is a good Democrat, stands in with the State Central Committee, which committee exists mainly at Lexington, and has a large fund of Democratic lore about him, from which to draw information, we give his comments hereunder, and you can take them as you find them:

The returns from the election come in tantalizingly slow. The State Central Committee, whose headquarters are at Lexington, know very little more about the results than any other citizen who reads the newspapers. At Frankfort where there are no accounts to consider and calculating election returns the authentic returns already in have been counted, and those not in have been carefully estimated, allowing the Republicans the benefit of all doubts, and the result is an estimated majority for Buckner of 17,357. Beyond a doubt, when the proper figures are known, it will be found that the majority of Buckner over Bradley will closely approximate the number here given.

THE CLIMAX.

FRENCH TIPTON, W. M. G. WHITE.
WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1887.

Buckner's exact majority is 17,015.

The President will go to Nashville in October.

Henry S. Ives, a fresh young man of New York, has failed for fifteen million dollars. He moneyed with Wall Street. Assets said to be about twelve million.

The "Sunny South," Atlanta, Georgia, the only literary paper in the South, is to give away five hundred dollars in prizes to its subscribers on the first of October. We would like to see the Sunny South, already a good paper, grow to be the best in the Union.

The Paris News says that 250 Democrats remained at home, and that is why Thomas, the Democratic candidate for the Legislature, ran more than 600 votes ahead of Buckner. That is the lamest excuse of the season. How a man could stay at home and vote for Thomas is what we cannot comprehend.

The Courier-Journal is of opinion that notwithstanding the returns so far received by the Secretary of State indicate a majority of the qualified voters of the State have voted in favor of a new Constitution, that the peculiar requirements of the law under which the election was held are such that the exact result can not be determined for some time.

The most appalling railroad disaster the world has ever known was that at Chatsworth, Illinois, on last Wednesday night. It far exceeds the horrors of Ashtabula and Tay Bridge. Whether the fearful tragedy was due to accident or carelessness, or fiendishness on the part of robbers is not known. At intervals of a few years these catastrophes of great magnitude occur, and there seems to be no way to prevent them.

The Stanford Journal has not regained its equilibrium since Lincoln county went Republican, and the entire Democracy of the State comes in for a share of "cussin'." The Journal says:

"The morning after an infamous decision by the Indiana Court of Appeals in a noted election contest, a leading paper at Indianapolis broke out in a double lead-ed article which began 'D—n their cowardly souls.' The same invective might be properly applied to Kentucky Democrats using trifling in the place of cowardly."

THE COUNT.

In round numbers, Buckner's majority in the State is 17,000.

Glancing back over the elections of the past ten years, we find that Kentucky's Democratic majorities have ranged from 35,000 to 62,000. This makes it obvious that there has been a decrease in the majority. Cleveland's majority was 35,000. The difference between that and Buckner's majority is 18,000. While a difference of 18,000 is rather conspicuous, it is not so great as that between the gubernatorial majority in 1875, and the former being 36,000, and the latter 62,000, a difference of 26,000—and that within a year, whereas the lapse of time between the Cleveland and Buckner elections was three years. More than this, there were but the two parties in 1876, whereas in 1887 there were four. The Prohibition vote in the late election amounted to 8,000, while the Labor vote was 5,000. Add these together and you have a total of 13,000 votes. If they came principally from the Democratic side, the loss is accounted for, and from the regularity and tenacity with which Republicans ordinarily vote with their party, it is not an unfair presumption. Again, General Buckner's total vote is in round numbers one hundred and forty-four thousand, while Cleveland's was one hundred and fifty-three thousand, or a decrease of eleven thousand. This difference is readily accounted for by the Prohibition and Labor vote.

So far, the explanation is plain, but is it satisfactory? First, is it fair to compare a State with a National election, and if so why should voters be deserving the Democratic and not the Republican party? If this desertion continues, how long will the Democratic party last?

But let us look on the Republican side. Bradley's total vote is one hundred and twenty-seven thousand, while Blaine's was only one hundred and nineteen thousand. Is this the result of Bradley's popularity over Blaine's, or the result of Buckner's want of popularity as compared with Cleveland's?

Next, let us compare the last two gubernatorial elections. Knott's majority, four years ago, was forty-four thousand, or greater than Buckner's by twenty-seven thousand. Knott's total vote was only one hundred and thirty-four thousand, or ten thousand less than Buckner's. Morrow's, Republican, was ninety thousand or thirty-seven thousand less than Bradley's. Thus it follows that while the Democratic vote increased ten thousand, the Republican vote increased thirty-seven thousand. The largest Democratic vote since ten war—Tilden's, 1876—was one hundred and sixty thousand. Take Buckner's vote of one hundred and forty-four thousand from that and only sixteen thousand are left to make up the Republican increase of thirty-seven thousand. Now from whence came the twenty-one thousand? The Republican total vote for the Tilden year was ninety thousand. This added to one hundred and sixty thousand makes a grand total of two hundred and fifty-seven thousand, whereas the grand total vote between Buckner and Bradley is two hundred and sixty thousand, an increase in the grand total of only three thousand while the increase of the Republican vote has been twenty-seven thousand, and the decrease of the Democratic majority twenty-six thousand. The thirteen thousand Prohibition and Labor votes account for half of the twenty-six thousand; but if we say that thirteen thousand more Democrats stayed at home, we have a total of one hundred and seventy-three thousand Democrats, or thirteen thousand more than was ever polled, while the Republicans show up only nine thousand more than any prior vote.

It is said that figures were lie, but they may be dreadfully misleading and puzzling.

The most conspicuous facts in connection with the recent election are that Mr. Bradley received the largest Republican vote cast since the war, and General Buckner the smallest Democratic majority. Be the cause what it may, there is but one remedy—promptness on the part of Democrats hereafter.

RAILROAD HORROR.

On last Wednesday night, an excursion train ran into a burning bridge at Chatsworth, near Forest, Illinois, and the bridge giving way precipitated an engine, two baggage cars and six coaches into the ravine, killing about seventy-five people and wounding several hundred. There were nine hundred and sixty passengers on board, and the wonder is that the death-roll was not greater. The wreck took fire, and had not the unbraced excursionists dug dry earth with their hands and splinters, and poured it on the flames, the horror would have been increased materially. Whether the fire was the result of accident or the work of incendiaries is not known. The heartrending scenes of carnage fill whole families perished in an instant. Husband was killed, leaving the wife; mother was snatched from children; and so the horrors ran through the long list of passengers. From the first car that went down, only four persons escaped alive out of sixty. As many of the wounded were at once removed to various parts of the country, the exact number of deaths will never be known. This calamity exceeds in magnitude any railroad accident that ever happened in the United States, and even in the world, except perhaps the Tay bridge, at which the entire train went down, and nothing was heard of body or any thing else.

Mr. Fairchild has the foundation completed for his new boarding house and is now putting up the frame.

Mr. Van Ryan's sister, Mrs. Rutherford, of Tennessee, has come to spend some time in the place.

Mr. T. J. Robinson lost a little brother last week. Died of flux.

Mr. J. Lusk died last Friday at the residence of his son, Dr. Lusk, of this place. Mr. Lusk had been in bad health for some time, and came here hoping to get better, but was taken with flux and soon passed away.

JOHN CLAY DEAD.

John M. Clay, the last surviving son of Henry Clay, died suddenly last Wednesday, at his home, near Lexington, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. Mr. Clay never entered politics, but lived the life of a successful farmer and breeder of fine horses. His stable were once widely known on the turf, but fifteen years ago he abandoned racing and afterwards raised thoroughbreds.

CONCERNING FARMERS.

Fine rains fell throughout Illinois and Wisconsin, last week, breaking the great drought.

The agent of Lehman Bros. has bought about 300 cattle in the vicinity of Mt. Sterling, weighing from 1500 to 1600 pounds at 4 cents.

Laurie county holds her third annual Fair near London on Thursday and Friday, September 8th and 9th. Seventy-five rings with liberal premiums.

Special to the Evening Wisconsin show that the rain storm was general, and that the drought-stricken districts have been effectively relieved.

In Clark county, T. G. Barrow sold to T. C. Robinson, two thousand bushels of bluegrass seed to be delivered August 1st, 1888, at fifty cents per bushel. John Judy bought of John W. Bean 60 cattle, weight 1450 pounds at 4 cents. Thus, Lish sold to John Judy, 20 cattle, weight 1,200 pounds at $3 per hundred. Asa Barrow & Son sold to W. R. Kidd for Lehman Bros. 90 cattle weighing 1534 pounds at 4 cents.

The wheat crop of France is good.

It is estimated that the yield will amount to 110,000,000 hectolitres, against 105,000,000 in 1886. Russian harvested reports are satisfactory. The crop is especially good in Bessarabia and Podolia; doubtful in Vonychia, Minck and Moheley, owing to the excessive rain; fair in the provinces bordering the sea of Azof, and the river Don, and exceptionally fine in Charkov and Poltava.

So far, the explanation is plain, but is it satisfactory? First, is it fair to compare a State with a National election, and if so why should voters be deserving the Democratic and not the Republican party? If this desertion continues, how long will the Democratic party last?

RAILROAD HORROR.

Reports are coming in as to the disaster to the rice crop in lower Carolina by the freshets of ten days ago. Fifteen thousand acres of rice on the Carolina side of the Savannah river have been almost totally destroyed. Augusta and twenty miles of the inferior are, for the third time, under water. Very little rice on the Savannah river will be saved, and fifteen million acres on the Ogeechee and five million acres on the Altamaha are threatened, but not yet lost. In the immediate vicinity of Charleston there has been no loss, and it is believed that fully one-half of the rice product of the State of 500,000 barrels of rice has been lost.

Gen. W. T. Withers, of Fairlawn Stockfarm, Lexington, has recently made the following sales: To B. P. Williamson, Raleigh, N. C., for $1,500; Vice Presidents, O. A. Bartholomew and J. B. McGuinn; Treasurer, Prof. James White; Secretary, H. W. Elliott; Assistant Secretary, George T. Walder; State Evangelist and financial Agent, B. G. Clay; Executive Committee, Robert Graham, R. T. Mathews, C. L. Loos, J. W. McGarvey, Prof. A. Fairhurst, James White; Standing Auditing Committee—J. B. Morton, T. B. Wallace. The session was in every way satisfactory, and the cause much advanced.

RELIGIOUS.

Elder C. P. Williamson is holding a protracted meeting at Bethlehem in Bourbon county.

Rev. Joe A. Munday, an evangelist of the salary of $4,000 per month to Mr. Cleveland, or any other man, while he is "electrioning for a second term of office." The Farmer's Alliance would probably be very angry were any one to suggest that its members have been making fools of themselves—Courier-Journal.

THE CLIMAX.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 17, 1887.

The gas well is now down two hundred feet.

Save money by reading advertisement "Last Call" elsewhere in this paper.

So far, Mr. H. B. Todd has learned nothing relative to the burning of his two barns.

There is now on deposit in the four banks of Richmond, to the credit of individuals, $482,700.

Misses Alice and Lena Duerson gave a croquet party at their delightful country home Saturday afternoon.

The finest grapes have been seen this season were left at this office yesterday by Miss Maggie May Mitchell.

Dr. Dillard Price, well-known in the Northern part of this county, has removed to Winchester.

E. Tutt Burnam, U. S. Special Commissioner, is sending numerous violators of the law to Louisville.

More than three hundred passengers bought tickets at the C. K. depot in Richmond, on last Saturday.

Richard, six-year-old son of Mr. R. L. Gentry, from the second story window of Sexton's grocery on Monday, but was not seriously hurt.

Mag. B. G. Thomas, the well-known horse dealer of Lexington, and brother of the late Judge C. B. Thomas, of the circuit court, is dangerously sick with Bright's disease.

Frank Maier the Journeyman tailor who attempted to kill his wife was fined $10 and costs, and exceedingly light punishment considering the quality of the crime.

Col. T. S. Moberly leaves this week with his herd of Shorthorns for Ohio. He will exhibit at a number of stock fairs in Ohio, Illinois and Indiana before his return. At these places he meets in competition all the best herds of the country yet he always brings home a liberal share of the honors to say nothing about the blue ribbons and the hard cash.

Mr. Joe S. Bronston says he has determined to go West and cannot afford to leave without selling his residence. To the mind of the writer this is one of the most desirable places in our city. It is indeed, at small outlay of money, a country home, and yet within a few minutes walk of any part of our town. You can't appreciate it until you see it. Don't let the opportunity pass and then wish you had bought it. Somebody is going to get a bargain.

Mr. B. Forest Riddell, of Evansville, Ind., formerly of this place, is in town this week. He is in the Livery business and left home in pursuit of a horse thief. A man hired a horse and failing to return it, Mr. Riddell followed him, found the man in Garrard county and received pay for his horse. He came on to Richmond to see his friends here. He is married, is looking happy and is doing a prosperous business.

Two Hops.

The young men gave two elegant hops in the New Opera House last week—Wednesday night and Friday night. They were well attended, and the spectators were numerous. The costumes were elegant, and the music furnished by Trost & Saxon's orchestra. There was present an unusually large number of visitors. The young men in and about Richmond don't do things in any half-way manner.

Elegant Party.

On Tuesday night of last week, the Misses Bronston gave an elaborate party in honor of Miss Lester of Washington City, their cousin. The residence and grounds were beautifully illuminated, and the parlor, halls, drawing room and dining-room fully decorated with vines and flowers.

The supper was an exquisite one, prepared by Diennell, and the delightful music furnished by Trost & Saxon. To employ the words of a visitor, it was "a joy to a party too pretty for description." Among those present were Miss Lester, Washington; Miss Holt, Frankfort; Miss Cheatum, Mt. Sterling; Miss Turner, Maysville; Miss Williams, Cynthia; Miss Fox and Miss Samuels, Mt. Sterling; Miss Atkinson, Missouri; Miss Tudor, Winchester; Miss Callie Cheatum, Florence Barlow, Nettie Stockton, Mary B. Harris, Nettie Cheatum, Minnie Leitcher, Blanche Hart, Jessie Rayburn, Rells Harmer, Mary Burnam, Bessie Miller, Ollie Gregory, Harry Miller, Minnie Baldwin, Anna Frazer, Minnie Smith, Lizzie Bennett, Katie Phelps, Zenobia Embry, Mary McCord, Della Ramsey, Mrs. M. M. Bronston, Mrs. J. S. Bronston. A number of gentlemen from other countries was present, and a full quota from Richmond and vicinity.

Pleasant Party.

A four miles ride Monday evening with a pretty girl, who shall here be nameless, brought the writer to the country residence of Mr. George Deatherage. We have a few points for THE CLIMAX. First we note the beautifully decorated lawn leading to the house with its many Chinese lanterns giving to each and every corner a renewal of that cordial welcome that has gone out with the generous invitations of Messrs. Sam B. and Will T. Deatherage. The party was one of the largest we have ever seen, fully 150 persons being present, and was given in honor of their guests, Misses Spears, Welch, and Duncan. It was, as some would term it, an old fashioned party—old fashioned at least so far as open handed hospitality and bountiful tables are concerned, groaning under the weight of which refreshes the inner man (and the girl too but we dare not say that out loud for girls at parties never eat anything).

The Messrs. Deatherage were assisted by Miss Emma DeJarnett, in doing the honor of the occasion, and so wretchedly did they entertain that for prolonged chat or for love making the boys had no other alternative than to steal a girl out of sight and seek a walk or a seat under the mellow light of a Chinese lantern in the lawn. Music lent its charms to the occasion, and the easy vice of dancing was indulged in by the young, while the older ones willingly practiced the laborious virtue of peeping in at the windows. Below we give a full list of the ladies present and dress of each.

THE CLIMAX begs pardon of its readers for omitting the list. We confess to the truth. We are out of M's; have borrowed all that our friend, the Register, has and still haven't enough. There are so many Misses, Mrs. Misses, Minnies, Marys, Maries, Madisons in print this week that we are short of M's. We select a few only from the list above referred to:

Miss Duncan, Garrard, albatross, lace and satin, natural flowers.

Miss Spears, Jessamine, black lace, pink, pearl, sash, diamonds, natural flowers.

Miss Welch, Jes-anine, cream albatross, electric green plush, natural flowers.

Miss Bright, Danville, blue silk, black velvet trimmings.

Miss Patterson, Cynthiana, cream albatross, black moire sash.

Miss Ethel Heacock, Lexington, cream albatross, lace overdress.

Miss Lillard, Lawrenceburg, embroidered mull, natural flowers.

Miss Jennie Lillard, Lawrenceburg, embroidered mull, natural flowers.

Miss Brock, Lexington, mille green satin with over-dress.

Miss Patton, Nicholasville, belotropo with lace.

Miss Muir, Fayette county, cream albatross with lace over-dress.

Miss Hayes, Lexington, cream albatross with lace.

Miss Rogers, Georgia, pink silk and lace.

Club Party.

Richmond has never had an entertainment superior to that given at Madison Club on Thursday night of last week. The great double parlors, the spacious ball-room, the ample dining-room, the capacious hall and the several other rooms were brilliantly lighted and profusely decorated, and Trost & Saxon's orchestra with its grandest mu-sic inspired the three-score belles and as many beaux, whose elaborate costumes and noble bearings combined with the splendors of the place forming an animated scene upon which the eye loves long to dwell. Those who had never visited the Club were astonished at its magnitude and elegance, and even its members had not thoroughly comprehended its magnificence. Twenty-five visiting ladies and more than as many from home, with thirty or more visiting gentlemen and an equal number from home gathered by the fashionable hour of 9, and until past 2 in the morning indulged in the various delights of conversation, promenading, dancing, eating, and general merrymaking. The table was prepared by an imported caterer, and the delicacies and dainties requisite on such occasions were present in abundance. There was no rush or confusion, or want or oversight, the progress of the evening being marked by that regularity and ease observed in houses which generally give to entertaining.

The ladies present and their costumes, so far as obtainable, were:

Miss Holt, of Frankfort, white silk, white passamanterie, lace and diamonds.

Miss Turner, Missouri, black lace dress, flowers, diamonds.

Miss Simms, Paris, black lace dress, natural flowers.

Miss Samuels, Mt. Sterling, blue silk, diamonds.

Miss Atkinson, Missouri, cored velvet, natural flowers, pearls, silk, lace, diamonds.

Miss Hood, Mississippi, white muslin, white silk, natural flowers.

Miss Park, Cynthia, white silk, ostrich feathers, diamonds.

Miss Muir, Fayette county, black brocaded velvet, lace, iridescent trimmings.

Miss Luckey, Missouri, pink brocaded silk, duchesse lace.

Miss Williams, Cynthia, blue muslin, velling, lace, diamonds.

Miss Walker, Lancaster, blue silk, lace, natural flowers, diamonds.

Miss Brown, Bourbon county, slate silk, velvet, steel trimmings.

Miss Shelly, Fayette county, black silk, lace and gold ornaments.

Miss Cheatum, Lexington, blue silk, over dress, natural flowers, diamonds.

Miss Slaughter, Danville, ciel and rose silk, amber beads.

Miss Fox, Mt. Sterling, pink silk, mull, lace, diamonds.
